Wayne Bank Teaches Children to Save in Lackawanna County

Scranton, PA – Members of Wayne Bank’s Lackawanna County Community Office team recently participated in the American Bankers Association Foundation’s Teach Children to Save program.

Central Scranton Assistant Manager, Denise Kern; Clarks Summit Teller, Karen Mirabelli; and Central Scranton Community Office Manager, Elaine Reuthe, presented financial management themed programs to elementary students from three Lackawanna County schools.

Students from Abington Christian Academy, South Abington Elementary, and Lackawanna Trail Elementary enjoyed the program which featured storytelling and interactive activities to keep the children engaged as they learned valuable financial lessons. Wayne Bank’s team covered topics including the differences between saving and spending and the importance of keeping track of money, and passed around an assortment of foreign currency for the children to see and touch. They also gave demonstrations on how to test bills with a counterfeit detector pen and how to count money using a currency counter, which were well received by the students.

“We are proud to participate in Teach Children to Save by bringing this beneficial program to our local schools,” stated Ms. Reuthe. “Our children are our future and we are so pleased to be able to share our knowledge with these students and encourage them to develop smart savings habits from a young age.”

Teach Children to Save, sponsored by the American Bankers Association Foundation and celebrated annually during Financial Literacy Month, is an opportunity for bankers to demonstrate their commitment to community by teaching young people the value of saving.

Wayne Bank is a subsidiary of Norwood Financial Corp., Member FDIC, and is located in Honesdale, Pennsylvania. The Bank has 26 Community Offices serving Wayne, Pike, Monroe, and Lackawanna Counties in Pennsylvania, along with Delaware and Sullivan Counties in New York State.
